

Emma & Johnna Pay-it-forward to “Our Little Robin Family”

Johnna and myself Emma try to pay-it-forward in our everyday life. Sometimes it's something as simple as picking up garbage on the beach or volunteering at events like The Run for the Cure. One time it even meant dying my hair blue and having it shaved to raise funds for the "Go Blue Go Bald" event for The Children's wish foundation.

Recently Johnna and I had the unique experience of having a Robin's nest outside our door. It's a simple story but an example of how even the smallest gesture of paying-it-forward can make a difference in our world. We watched in awe as this little bird slowly and methodically built her nest, flying back and forth carrying twigs and straw to build her perfectly rounded little haven.

Eventually, four little turquoise eggs appeared and we waited patiently until the little babies were born on May 7th. We made excuses to go outside, like taking the dog we could check on them.

from work and was shocked to be moved and was balancing awning. I don't know what or how the nest was moved but I knew that I had to move it to a safe spot before it fell. Those four little babies wouldn't live if I didn't. I raced around the house looking for a step ladder and while Johnna kept an eye out for mom and dad, I gently moved the nest back into place.

out repeatedly, just so

One day I came home find that the nest had over the edge of the how the nest was moved but I knew that I had to move it to a safe spot before it fell. Those four little babies wouldn't live if I didn't. I raced around the house looking for a step ladder and while Johnna kept an eye out for mom and dad, I gently moved the nest back into place.

I am so happy to say that we were able to watch these babies grow and eventually leave the nest. It was just a reminder of how precious life is.

